

Myrick & Co. Selects Digital Now to Secure Client Privacy, Streamline Critical Data Exchange

HERNDON, Va., Jan. 23, 2008 - D.C.-based accounting firm Myrick & Co. announced today it has selected Digital Now Inc., a pioneer document delivery and storage services, to help them secure and enhance critical data exchange with clients through the new online service DEXSAR.

“Our goal is to provide clients more than just email or paper documentation as both can be tampered with, and therefore, neither method is entirely secure,” said Charles Myrick, founder and CEO of Myrick & Co. “DEXSAR will help us protect the privacy of our clients and their accounting records while taking customer relationship management to the next level through digital technology.”

“We’re excited to be working with Myrick & Co. to lead traditional accounting into the digital age,” said Gary Mueller, CEO and president of Digital Now. “By integrating DEXSAR into the firm’s daily businesses processes, Myrick’s clients now have a user-friendly, easy-to-use, online system for tracking and managing their financial records throughout the year. This will be tremendous for further building the firm’s customer retention.”

Myrick & Co. is the first accounting firm in the Greater Washington area to implement DEXSAR, a value-added service that gives clients access to their financial documentation 24/7 through their own private digital safe-deposit box from which information can be easily and securely exchanged and retrieved in real time.

“Our company is not just an accounting firm, but a service organization that continually seeks to understand client needs and finds effective, innovative ways to fulfill them,” said Myrick.

Digital Now develops online business and technology solutions to assist businesses, professional service firms, academic institutions and membership-based organizations increase client communication, loyalty and retention through online value-add services.
